Latest from Governor Beshear:

Commissioner for the Department for Public Health Dr. Steven Stack said, "Does our right to gather together entitle us to have other people die as a result? That is essentially, what happened. This is about any gathering, not just churches. We are at a time and place in history when the human species has never faced, for the last hundred years, a threat like we do now. The choices and decisions you make have implications, not only for yourself, but for others."

Update on drive-through testing sites

Today, the Governor announced a partnership that will greatly expand the testing capability in Kentucky. The state's first drive-through testing site will be free of charge and open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, April 13, through Thursday, April 16, at the Franklin County Fairgrounds.

Any future locations will be announced and the overall goal of the partnership is to conduct 20,000 tests over the next five weeks.

"I'm very excited about this. It's good news," Gov. Beshear said. "We've been working with Kroger for several weeks just trying to get it right. The potential here, just from this program, could almost double the amount of testing we have right now."
