Latest from Governor Beshear:

Gov. Andy Beshear on Monday made a call to action for any person, organization or business that can donate more personal protective equipment (PPE) for frontline workers in the fight against the novel coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19).

"I know we still have more PPE out there, and we need it. This is a call to action, and you all have responded, but I know there's more," the Governor said. If a local person has PPE to donate please contact the Metcalfe County Judges Office and speak to Lorrie Gilpin or Emory Kidd. We will be making arrangements to accept the donation. The number is 270-431-3181

Gov. Beshear and others have said latex-free gloves, gowns and N95 and surgical masks remain in tight supply. He said his administration is making constant efforts to purchase more PPE, but has faced significant challenges.

"Almost every lead we get is like going down a rabbit hole, or it is diverted by the federal government or to a different place," the Governor said.

A new hotline (1-833-GIVE PPE) and website (giveppe.ky.gov) have streamlined the entire donation process. In addition, PPE donations now are being accepted at all 16 Kentucky State Police posts across the commonwealth and at Transportation Cabinet offices in Louisville and Lexington.

The Governor also noted that earlier in the day, Vice President Mike Pence warned that Americans would experience "heartbreaking loss" this week.
